

My husband and I have been bombarded with telemarketing calls. Example:
10/31/2002 I had 20 telemarketing calls and 1 personal call. It has gotten so bad that I am now screening my calls with the answering machine. My chief concern is I will miss an emergency call because the call waiting will not kick in. Now the public will have to depend on the government to protect our privacy. I resent the fact that the phone companies sell our phone number to the telemarketers and then try to sell the public a service that will block those calls. To me that seems to be illegal.
